The Academy’s architecture awards program began in 1955 with the inauguration of the Arnold W. Brunner Memorial Prize and has since expanded to include four Arts and Letters Awards. This year’s recipients were chosen from a group of individuals and practices nominated by the members of Arts and Letters. The members of the 2025 selection committee were Toshiko Mori, Robert P. Hubbard Professor in the Practice of Architecture; Meejin Yoon (MAUD ’97; chair); Elizabeth Diller; Michael Maltzan (MARCH ’88); Annabelle Selldorf; and Nader Tehrani (MAUD ’91).

Last month, the AIA elevated 93 architects to its College of Fellows, an honor reserved for less than 3 percent of AIA members. The fellowship program recognizes architects who have achieved a standard of excellence in the profession and have made a significant national contribution to architecture and society. New fellows, to be acknowledged at the AIA Conference on Architecture & Design (AIA25) in Boston in early June, include Stuart Emmons (MARCH ’88), Eric C. Y. Fang (MARCH ’90), Andrea D. Lamberti (MARCH ’97), Keith L. Lashley (MDes ’99), Karen A. Lu (MARCH ’98), Joshua Stefan Ramus (MARCH ’96), Thomas F. Robinson (MARCH ’00), Georgeen Theodore (MAUD ’02), and Lyndon Uykim Neri (MARCH ’92).
